IN-HOUSE AND CORPORATE COUNSEL SUMMARY

The United States is one of the most sought-after arbitration venues in the world. The United States is known for vigorous enforcement of arbitral awards, neutral dispute resolution, and judicial preferences in favor of arbitration. The United States also has a reputation for permitting more invasive discovery than other jurisdictions, even in streamlined arbitration proceedings.

Many arbitrations in the United States are governed by the Federal Arbitration Act (“FAA”), which applies to any arbitration affecting interstate commerce (generally defined as commercial trade, business, movement of goods or money, or transportation from one state to another, which is regulated by the federal government according to powers set out in Article I of the Constitution) or international commerce. Each state typically has its own arbitration statute as well. However, a state statute generally applies only where the FAA is silent or if the dispute is entirely local to a particular state. The FAA bears some similarity to the UNCITRAL Model Law on International Commercial Arbitration. However, there are important differences. Unlike the Model Law, the FAA provides different grounds for vacating an award and also contains some default rules of procedure where the parties fail to agree to a governing set of rules.

When considering arbitration in the United States, corporate and in-house counsel should consider the following factors about this jurisdiction:

| Key places of arbitration in the jurisdiction? | Popular venues include New York, Miami, San Francisco, Los Angeles, and Houston. |
| Civil law / Common law environment? | The U.S. is a common law country. Arbitrators are more likely to be persuaded by case law than in civil law countries. |
| Confidentiality of arbitrations? | U.S. arbitrations are not automatically confidential, but the parties may agree to keep the proceedings confidential. |
| Requirement to retain (local) counsel? | Each U.S. state separately governs the practice of law within its borders, and may prohibit foreign attorneys or attorneys from other U.S. states from participating in arbitrations located in that state. |
| Ability to present party employee witness testimony? | Arbitrators generally have broad discretion on evidentiary rulings, subject to any contrary agreement by the parties or applicable arbitration rules. |
| Ability to hold meetings and/or hearings outside of the seat? | Typically, there is an ability to hold meetings and/or hearings outside the seat. |
| Availability of interest as a remedy? | Parties in U.S. arbitrations may claim the full panoply of potential remedies, including pre- and post-judgment interest, costs, and potentially even punitive damages. However, the default “American Rule” is that each side pays its own attorney’s fees. |
| Ability to claim for reasonable costs incurred for the arbitration? | Parties are generally required to bear their own costs and legal fees, barring statutory provisions or an agreement to the contrary. |
| Restrictions regarding contingency fee arrangements and/or third- | Each U.S. state separately governs the terms and legality of funding arrangements. Each state has attorney ethical and |

ARBITRATION PRACTITIONER SUMMARY

While the Federal Arbitration Act ("FAA") is the primary arbitration statute in the United States, each state typically has its own arbitration statute as well. The FAA generally applies broadly—applying to any arbitration agreement or award which touches on interstate commerce (generally defined as commercial trade, business, movement of goods or money, or transportation from one state to another, which is regulated by the federal government according to powers set out in Article I of the Constitution) or international commerce. Typically, the FAA, when applicable, will pre-empt any contrary state law provisions. However, if the FAA is silent with respect to a particular issue, the applicable state law will control. The state arbitration law will also apply to the extent an arbitration agreement or award does not implicate interstate or international commerce—for instance, a purely local dispute that does not involve federal law. Moreover, the FAA, when applicable, may be subject to differing interpretations by the different U.S. federal and state courts. These courts may reach differing interpretations in areas in which the U.S. Supreme Court has not ruled.

In this context, the following are key questions for legal practitioners to consider when engaged in arbitrations in the United States. As these questions are answered, the parameters of the arbitration will take shape, and practitioners will know what to expect as the arbitral proceedings move forward.

<tr>
<th>Date of arbitration law?</th>

<tr>
<td>Availability of specialised courts or judges at the key seat(s) in the jurisdiction for handling arbitration-related matters?</td>
<td>The availability of specialised courts or judges varies across the U.S. For example, New York has implemented specific procedures to help its courts develop arbitration expertise, including by designating a specialized judge to handle all the New York County Commercial Division’s international arbitration cases.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Availability of ex parte pre-arbitration interim measures?</td>
<td>Most U.S. federal and state courts permit some form of pre-arbitration interim measures. Whether the procedure is ex parte or requires some form of notice to the parties varies.</td>

</tr>
<tr>
<td>Grounds for annulment of awards additional to those based on the criteria for the recognition and enforcement of awards under the New York Convention?</td>
<td>The grounds for annulment of awards (referred to in the U.S. as vacatur) under the FAA are: (i) the award was procured through corruption, fraud, or undue means; (ii) the arbitrators exhibited bias or acted corruptly; (iii) the arbitrators engaged in misconduct in the course of proceedings, prejudicing the parties or otherwise raising due process concerns; and (iv) the arbitrators exceeded their power or imperfectly executed them that a mutual, final, and definite award upon the subject matter...</td>

<tr>
<th>Courts' attitude towards the recognition and enforcement of foreign awards annulled at the seat of the arbitration?</th>
<th>Foreign awards are readily confirmed and enforced in the U.S., consistent with the policy of the New York Convention. Depending on the circumstances, U.S. courts typically would not enforce an award that was annulled at the seat of the arbitration.</th>

Other key points to note?

1. What type of court intervention, if any, can be expected during the arbitral proceedings? U.S. federal and state courts may intervene in select circumstances to facilitate arbitration of claims. This might include, for example, enjoining a party from proceeding with arbitration or compelling discovery or other disclosure in aid of arbitration.

2. In what format should the award be? Typically, awards under the FAA and state arbitration laws are written, but the FAA does not require that they be signed, dated, or reasoned.

3. What are the requirements for a valid and enforceable award? Typically, under the FAA and state arbitration laws, an award is valid and enforceable so long as it is written and the arbitral process in conducted in accordance with due process.
The Federal Arbitration Act (“FAA”) is the primary arbitration statute in the United States. It was enacted by the U.S. in 1925 to set forth the national policy of encouraging arbitration as an alternative dispute resolution mechanism. The FAA thus applies broadly, reaching any arbitration agreement or award which touches on interstate commerce (generally defined as commercial trade, business, movement of goods or money, or transportation from one state to another, which is regulated by the federal government according to powers set out in Article I of the Constitution) or international commerce. While states also have their own arbitration statutes, most of which are modelled on the FAA or the UNCITRAL Model Law, the FAA will pre-empt any contradictory state law provisions. However, if the FAA is silent with respect to a particular issue, the applicable state law will apply. The state arbitration law will also apply to the extent an arbitration agreement or award does not implicate interstate or international commerce – for instance, a purely local dispute that does not involve federal law. Moreover, the FAA, when applicable, may be subject to differing interpretations by the different U.S. federal or state courts. These courts may reach differing conclusions in the absence of U.S. Supreme Court intervention.

The FAA is divided into three Chapters: Chapter 1 is the principal chapter, setting forth the basic operation of federal arbitration law; Chapter 2 incorporates the New York Convention on the Recognition and Enforcement of Foreign Arbitral Awards (“New York Convention”), which requires signatory states to enforce and recognize arbitration agreements and awards issued by other contracting states; and Chapter 3 incorporates the Inter-American Convention on International Commercial Arbitration of 1975 (“Panama Convention”), which applies a very similar, but more specific regime amongst signatory states in North, Central, and South America. Significantly, the provisions of Chapter 1 are applied in all cases unless a more specific provision of Chapter 2 or 3 conflicts with Chapter 1. Chapter 3 also incorporates the majority of Chapter 2 into Chapter 3.

The key provisions of Chapter 1 (Sections 1-10) are as follows:

- Section 2 provides that arbitration agreements are valid and enforceable just as any other contract provision.
- Sections 3 and 4 provide courts with authorization to, respectively, (a) stay any judicial proceedings that are properly the subject of arbitration, and (b) compel parties to arbitrate pursuant to the terms of their agreement. In theory, courts are authorized to conduct an analysis as to whether a particular dispute, or a particular party, is properly subject to the arbitration agreement unless there is “clear and unmistakable evidence” that the parties agreed to let the arbitrators decide their own jurisdiction (i.e., “competence-competence”). In practice, however, many arbitral institution rules provide the arbitrators with such authorization, so that an agreement referencing those rules will preclude U.S. courts from an exacting inquiry into the applicability of the arbitration agreement.
- Section 5 grants judges authority to appoint arbitrators, but only if the parties fail to do so notwithstanding a valid arbitration agreement. Section 5 does not specify any particular method for doing so.
- Section 7 permits courts to assist arbitrators with witnesses and evidence through the issuance of subpoenas, but, as discussed below, many other measures in aid of arbitration (i.e., interim relief) are left to provisions of state law.
- Sections 9 and 10 respectively govern confirmation and vacatur (known in other jurisdictions as “set-aside” or “annulment”) of any award rendered in the U.S., whether domestic or international. Section 10 enumerates four, limited grounds for vacatur or non-confirmation: (i) the award was procured through corruption, fraud, or undue means; (ii) the arbitrators exhibited bias or acted corruptly; (iii) the arbitrators engaged in misconduct in the course of proceedings, prejudicing the parties or otherwise raising due process concerns; and (iv) the arbitrators exceeded their power or "so imperfectly execut[ed] them that a mutual, final, and definite award upon the subject matter was not made." Some federal courts recognize an additional, judicially-created basis for vacatur when the arbitrators act in "manifest disregard of the law." While this latter ground has been the subject of significant debate and controversy, it is widely accepted that courts are not to review an arbitrator's findings on the merits, and that even clear errors in applying or interpreting the relevant substantive law of the dispute do not provide a basis for vacatur.

- Significantly, Chapter 1 does not confer subject matter jurisdiction on the federal courts, which require an independent basis for such jurisdiction over the case.

The key additional provisions of Chapters 2 (Sections 201-208) and 3 (Sections 301-307) are as follows:

- Sections 201 and 301 confirm the New York Convention and Panama Convention, respectively, as U.S. law. Accordingly, if a party seeks to enforce an award rendered in a New York or Panama Convention signatory state (outside of the United States), a U.S. court must confirm the award unless one of the bases for non-recognition set forth in those Conventions applies. The two Conventions contain nearly identical provisions for non-enforcement, broadly summarized as follows:
  - The agreement to arbitrate was invalid or void under the law to which the parties have subjected it, or the parties were under some incapacity.
  - The party against whom the award is being invoked did not have proper notice or was otherwise unable to present its case.
  - The award deals with subject matter outside of the scope of the parties’ agreement.
  - The composition of the arbitral tribunal was not in accordance with the parties’ agreement or, failing such agreement, with the procedural law governing the arbitration.
  - The award has been set aside by the “competent authority” (generally, the courts at the seat of arbitration).
  - The dispute deals with subject matter that is not arbitrable in the place where the award is to be confirmed.
  - Recognition or enforcement of the award would contravene public policy in the place where the award is to be confirmed.

- While (unlike the New York Convention) the Panama Convention does not on its face limit its applicability to agreements and awards rendered in other contracting states, Chapter 3 (Section 304) inserts this reciprocity requirement into the FAA.

- Chapters 2 and 3 provide for federal court subject matter jurisdiction in certain circumstances involving arbitration agreements and awards subject to the New York and Panama Conventions (i.e., international arbitration agreements and awards).

1. The legal framework of the jurisdiction

1.1 Is the arbitration law based on the UNCITRAL Model Law?

No. The Federal Arbitration Act (the “FAA”), was enacted in 1925 and largely predates the Model Law. However, eight U.S. states have adopted arbitration laws based on the UNCITRAL Model Law.

Florida Supplement: Florida has two arbitrations statutes: (1) an international statute, the Florida International Arbitration Act ("Florida FIAA"), enacted in 2010 based on the Model Law; and (2) a domestic statute, the Revised Florida Arbitration Code ("Revised Code"), based on the Revised Uniform Arbitration Act. The Florida FIAA adopts the Model Law's definition of international arbitration; any arbitration seated in Florida that does not fall within that definition is governed by the Revised Code.

Texas Supplement: The Texas legislature passed the Texas Arbitration Act (the "TAA") in 1965, which is sometimes referred to as the Texas General Arbitration Act. It has now been codified as Chapter 171 of the Texas Civil Practice and Remedies Code. The TAA largely tracks the substantive provisions of the FAA, with a few exceptions. The Texas legislature enacted a separate international statute in 1989, referred to as the Texas International Arbitration Act (the "TIAA"). The TIAA drew from the UNICITRAL Model Law as in force at that time and was codified as Chapter 172 of the Texas Civil Practice and Remedies Code.

1.1.1 If yes, what key modifications have been made to it?

The FAA, if applicable, pre-empts any inconsistent state law provisions, including any provisions based on the Model Law. States with laws based on the UNCITRAL Model Law have generally adopted its key provisions, sometimes with modifications appropriate to the local jurisdiction. For example, California (discussed in more detail in a separate section) adopted the first six chapters of the 1985 Model Law and added a provision on conciliation aimed at Pacific Rim businesses that prefer a less formal dispute resolution process.

Florida Supplement: As noted above, Florida adopted the Florida FIAA in 2010. The FIAA is based upon, and nearly identical to, the Model Law, making only a few minor, procedural additions.

Texas Supplement: As mentioned, the TAA tracks many of the relevant substantive provisions of the FAA, with certain modifications. Texas courts have determined that certain provisions of the TAA are pre-empted by the FAA. For example, a Texas court has held that a TAA provision requiring additional signature of an arbitration agreement in personal injury cases is pre-empted by the FAA.

As also mentioned, the TIAA was enacted in 1989 and generally tracked the UNICITRAL Model Law. Similar to the California international statute, the TIAA contains provisions on conciliation in Subchapter H, stating in Section 172.201 that it "is the policy of this state to encourage parties to an international commercial agreement or transaction that qualifies for arbitration or conciliation under this chapter to resolve disputes arising from those agreements or transactions through conciliation."

1.1.2 If no, what form does the arbitration law take?

International commercial arbitrations in the United States are governed by the FAA. FAA Chapter 1 applies to commercial arbitration generally, FAA Chapter 2 implements the New York Convention, and FAA Chapter 3 implements the Panama Convention. The FAA differs from the Model Law in the default selection rules.

for and number of arbitrators, current grounds for setting aside an award, the authority of a court to modify and correct an award, and the level of procedural detail provided.

As noted above, under the U.S. federal system, federal arbitration law supersedes any inconsistent state law. In addition, U.S. federal courts often, but not always, have jurisdiction over international arbitration-related disputes. Consequently, state law will almost never provide the primary source of law for an international arbitration. However, the interpretation of the FAA on some questions has developed differently in different federal circuits, and between the federal courts and the courts of some of the states.

Each state has its own arbitration laws, which may occasionally be used to fill gaps in the FAA. For example, New York’s arbitration law, codified at Article 75 of the New York Civil Procedure Practice and Rules, applies to both domestic and international arbitrations. New York has also implemented specific procedures to help its courts develop arbitration expertise, including by designating a specialized judge to handle all of the New York County Commercial Division’s international arbitration cases.

1.2 When was the arbitration law last revised?

The FAA has not undergone an overall revision since it was first enacted in 1925. Significant additions to the FAA were made in 1970 to implement the New York Convention and in 1990 to implement the Panama Convention. Two separate enactments in 1988 made minor updates to the general provisions. Many state laws, including in UNCITRAL Model Law states, have been revised more recently.

Florida Supplement: The Florida FIAA was last amended in 2013 to, inter alia, incorporate another statute providing that a party that initiates arbitration, or is party to an agreement to arbitrate, in Florida consents to in personam jurisdiction in Florida with respect to any action arising out of or in connection to the arbitration and any resulting order or award.
Texas Supplement: The TAA and the TIAA were both amended in 1997 and as mentioned above, are codified in the Texas Civil Practice and Remedies Code.

2. The arbitration agreement

2.1 How do the courts in the jurisdiction determine the law governing the arbitration agreement?

The FAA provides the procedural law for arbitrations seated in the United States, with gaps filled by state law where applicable.

Principles of ordinary contract law, which may be the law of a U.S. or foreign jurisdiction, govern the validity, revocability, and enforceability of arbitration agreements. State law that imposes more onerous requirements on arbitration agreements than on other types of agreements is preempted as inconsistent with the FAA. If the parties' underlying contract contains a choice of law provision, a court will generally apply the law selected by the parties to any questions concerning the arbitration agreement. Where the contract does not contain a choice of law provision, a court will conduct a conflict of laws analysis, applying the conflict of laws rules of the state in which it sits to determine which law to apply. These rules vary from state to state; the traditional approach was to apply the law of the place where the contract was made, but most states now weigh which jurisdiction has the most significant relationship to the transaction or the greatest interest in applying its own laws.

Florida Supplement: Florida follows the traditional approach, applying, in the absence of any choice-of-law provision contained in the arbitral agreement, the law of the place where the arbitration agreement was made to interpret questions about the agreement, including its validity. At least one federal court in Florida has ruled that, because arbitration agreements are severable under federal law, arbitration agreements that do not themselves contain a choice-of-law clause are subject to the law in which they were made—even where the underlying agreement contains a separate choice-of-law clause selecting the laws of a different state.

Texas Supplement: Texas courts generally follow the most significant relationship test in determining the law applicable to a contract that does not contain a choice of law provision.

2.2 Is the arbitration agreement considered to be independent from the rest of the contract in which it is set forth?

Yes. An arbitration provision is severable from the contract in which it is included. Thus, a challenge to the underlying contract as a whole does not prevent a court from enforcing a specific agreement to arbitrate.
Unless there is a challenge to the validity of the arbitration clause itself, the arbitrator resolves questions concerning the validity of the underlying contract in the first instance. This federal rule of severability applies in state as well as federal courts and pre-empts inconsistent state law.

2.3 What are the formal requirements (if any) for an enforceable arbitration agreement?

The FAA requires that the arbitration agreement be in writing. Courts within the United States are divided on the specific requirements that must be met for an agreement to satisfy the “in writing” requirement. For example, the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit (which includes New York) has held that an arbitration clause in a contract signed by only one party did not satisfy the writing requirement, while the United States Courts of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit (which includes Texas) and the Eleventh Circuit (which includes Florida) have held that an unsigned writing may be sufficient in some cases.

2.4 To what extent, if at all, can a third party to the contract containing the arbitration agreement be bound by said arbitration agreement?

As arbitration is fundamentally a matter of contract, arbitration agreements are subject to ordinary principles of law that allow a contract to be enforced by or against non-parties in limited circumstances. These principles include estoppel, incorporation by reference, assumption, waiver, agency, third-party beneficiary, and alter ego or veil piercing.

2.5 Are there restrictions to arbitrability?

The FAA contains no restrictions to arbitrability as to a class of disputes or persons. The central purpose of the FAA is to ensure that agreements to arbitrate are enforced in accordance with their terms and are treated no less favourably than other contracts. The FAA pre-empts state law—statutory or common law—that prohibits arbitration of a particular type of claim. Accordingly, parties may agree to arbitrate claims based on statutory rights, including those that arise in connection with arbitrable contract issues, in the absence of a federal statute excluding the specific statutory claims from arbitration. Congress has enacted such exclusions only in very limited circumstances. In general, claims arising under securities laws, antitrust laws and other statutes enacted... to protect the public interest are fully arbitrable if they fall within the scope of a contractual arbitration clause.

2.5.1 Do these restrictions relate to specific domains (such as IP, corporate law etc.)?

No.

2.5.2 Do these restrictions relate to specific persons (i.e. State entities, consumers etc.)?

No. Although some states have attempted to create rules limiting the ability of corporations to include agreements to arbitrate in consumer contracts, the U.S. Supreme Court has struck down such provisions as contrary to the FAA’s principle of non-discrimination against arbitration agreements.48

3. Intervention of domestic courts

3.1 Will the courts stay litigation if there is a valid arbitration agreement covering the dispute?

Yes. Upon application of a party, a U.S. court where litigation is pending is required to stay the litigation if the court is satisfied that the issue involved is referable to arbitration, unless the applicant for a stay has waived the right to arbitrate.49

When a case contains both claims that the parties have agreed to submit to arbitration and other claims, the court may, in its discretion, stay litigation of the entire matter or stay only the claims covered by the arbitration agreement.50

Florida Supplement: The Florida FIAA is similar to the FAA in that it requires a court to refer to arbitration any matter that is subject to an arbitration agreement, provided a party so requests before submitting its first statement on the substance of the dispute.51

Texas Supplement: The TAA provides that a court “shall order the parties to arbitrate on application of a party showing: (1) an agreement to arbitrate; and (2) the opposing party’s refusal to arbitrate.”52 The TAA further provides that a “court shall stay a proceeding that involves an issue subject to arbitration if an order for arbitration or an application for that order is made under this subchapter.”53 Section 172.174 of the TIAA provides that, “On request of a party, a court in which a pending judicial proceeding is being brought by a party to an arbitration agreement to obtain relief with respect to a matter covered by the arbitration agreement shall (1) stay the judicial proceeding; and (2) refer the parties to arbitration.”54

3.1.1 If the place of the arbitration is inside of the jurisdiction?

Yes.

3.1.2 If the place of the arbitration is outside of the jurisdiction?

Yes. The FAA does not distinguish between a stay in favour of arbitration inside or outside of the jurisdiction.

49 9 U.S.C. § 3.

50 Genesco, Inc. v. T. Kakiuchi & Co., Ltd., 815 F.2d 840, 856 (2d Cir. 1987).

A motion for a stay is often brought together with a motion to compel arbitration.\(^{55}\) For agreements covered by the New York Convention or Panama Convention, the FAA permits courts to compel arbitration at any place provided for in the parties' agreement, whether “within or without the United States.”\(^{56}\) For agreements not covered by the New York Convention, there is disagreement as to whether courts may compel arbitration outside their own judicial district, even when the parties' agreement provides otherwise.\(^{57}\) This distinction is seldom if ever important, because the courts still must stay proceedings even if they do not directly order the parties to arbitrate. Virtually all modern arbitration rules recognize that arbitration may proceed in the absence of a party, and therefore a court order compelling a party to arbitrate is rarely necessary once a court has determined that a dispute is subject to arbitration and has stayed a court proceeding in favour of arbitration.

Florida Supplement: Although arbitrations subject to the Florida FIAA typically take place in Florida, the law does not distinguish between a referral for arbitration inside or outside of the state.\(^{58}\)

Texas Supplement: The TAA and the TIAA also do not distinguish between a referral for arbitration inside or outside the state, for the purposes of a stay.

3.2 How do courts treat injunctions by arbitrators enjoining parties to refrain from initiating, halt or withdraw litigation proceedings?

The FAA requires a U.S. court to stay litigation proceedings only when the court is satisfied that the issue is referable to arbitration under the parties' agreement.\(^{59}\) Therefore, a party seeking to enforce an anti-suit injunction from an arbitrator would still need to convince the U.S. court independently that the parties intended to submit the issue to arbitration.

3.3 On what ground(s) can the courts intervene in arbitrations seated outside of the jurisdiction? (Relates to the anti-suit injunction but not only)

U.S. courts may not intervene directly in an arbitration seated outside of the jurisdiction. However, a U.S. court may issue injunctions against a party in aid of arbitration seated anywhere in its jurisdiction and may also compel discovery for use in foreign or international arbitrations.

Injunctions: Before issuing an injunction, a U.S. court must first satisfy itself of its jurisdiction over the party to be enjoined. When the party to be enjoined is not a citizen or resident of the state where the court is located, and has not consented to the court's jurisdiction, there must be sufficient minimum contacts between that party and the forum state such that a U.S. court's exercise of personal jurisdiction over that party does not offend due process.\(^{60}\)

Ordinarily, to obtain an injunction in aid of arbitration, a party must show that it will suffer irreparable harm in the absence of an injunction, that it is likely to succeed on the merits of its claims, and that the balance of hardships tips in its favour.\(^{61}\) Courts may also consider the public interest and the interest of comity to foreign nations. Courts are frequently reluctant to issue injunctive relief in aid of arbitration if such relief can be timely obtained from the arbitration tribunal.\(^{62}\) When, after a U.S. court grants an injunction, the arbitrator subsequently decides to modify or terminate the injunction, several U.S. courts dicta from the U.S. Supreme Court, however, several district courts have held that they could order such measures expressly not limited to arbitral proceedings within Florida. Relying on subsequent dicta from the U.S. Supreme Court, however, several district courts have held that they could order such discovery, with some courts drawing a distinction between "private" commercial arbitrations and investor-State arbitrations. Circuit courts have so far declined to address the issue and uncertainty remains as to the availability and scope of such discovery in aid of arbitration.

Discovery: By statute, U.S. courts may compel discovery for use in foreign or international tribunals. The Second and Fifth Circuits have held that this does not include arbitral tribunals. Relying on subsequent dicta from the U.S. Supreme Court, however, several district courts have held that they could order such discovery, with some courts drawing a distinction between "private" commercial arbitrations and investor-State arbitrations. Circuit courts have so far declined to address the issue and uncertainty remains as to the availability and scope of such discovery in aid of arbitration.

Florida Supplement: The Florida FIAA states that: "It is not incompatible with an arbitration agreement for a party to request from a court, before or during arbitral proceedings, an interim measure of protection and for a court to grant such a measure." Florida courts have not had occasion to interpret this provision, although it is expressly not limited to arbitral proceedings within Florida.

Texas Supplement: Section 171.086 of the TAA is titled Orders That May Be Rendered and provides for a number of measures that a court may take, before or during an arbitration. This includes an order to "invoke the jurisdiction of the court over the adverse party." This provision is not expressly limited to arbitrations seated in Texas. Section 172.175 of the TIAA concerns Interim Orders, and contains a similar provision. See e.g., Blumenthal v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc., 910 F.2d 1049 (2nd Cir. 1990); In re S.W. Ranching Inc., 2017 WL 4274309, at *3 (S.D. Tex. Sept. 22, 2017).

By statute, U.S. courts may compel discovery for use in foreign or international tribunals. The Second and Fifth Circuits have held that this does not include arbitral tribunals. Relying on subsequent dicta from the U.S. Supreme Court, however, several district courts have held that they could order such discovery, with some courts drawing a distinction between "private" commercial arbitrations and investor-State arbitrations. Circuit courts have so far declined to address the issue and uncertainty remains as to the availability and scope of such discovery in aid of arbitration.

See 28 U.S.C. § 1782 (authorizing U.S. courts to order discovery (i) upon request of an “interested person,” (ii) over a person or entity “found” in the United States, (iii) "for use" in a proceeding “in a foreign or international tribunal”).

Sept. 15, 2010) (both applying the multifactor test developed by the Supreme Court in Intel to grant requests for discovery to be used in investor-state arbitrations).

provision as applied in international proceedings. It provides for several ways in which a court may intervene with an arbitration, either before or during the proceedings.

4. The conduct of the proceedings

4.1 Can parties retain outside counsel or be self-represented?

The FAA does not address the representation of parties. Parties should consult the rules governing counsel in the state in which the arbitration is seated. Those rules generally provide that individuals may be represented by counsel or represent themselves on a pro se basis. However, many states, including New York and Florida, require corporations and business entities to be represented by counsel. In addition, some states have other rules that may bear on the representation of parties by an out-of-state or foreign lawyer. In New York, for instance, courts have permitted a foreign attorney to represent a party in an arbitration on the theory that such attorney is not engaging in the unauthorized practice of law due to the unique nature of arbitration.

Florida Supplement: The Rules Governing the Florida Bar specifically permit a foreign attorney to represent a party to an arbitration, provided that either (1) such foreign attorney is associated with a lawyer admitted to the Florida Bar; (2) such foreign attorney is representing a client that resides in or has an office in the attorney’s home state; or (3) the arbitral proceeding is reasonably related to the foreign attorney’s practice in a jurisdiction in which he or she is admitted.

Texas Supplement: Neither the TAA, the TIAA nor the Texas Disciplinary Rules of Professional Conduct speak to whether a foreign attorney may represent a party to an arbitration. The Texas Disciplinary Rules of Professional Conduct contain provisions regarding the unauthorized practice of law. Texas has not adopted the provisions of the American Bar Association Model law regarding lawyers admitted in another United States jurisdiction or in a foreign jurisdiction. The Texas rules do allow Texas lawyers to “employ[ ] the services of paraprofessionals and delegat[ ]e functions to them,” as long as the lawyer supervises the delegated work.

4.2 How strictly do courts control arbitrators’ independence and impartiality? For example: does an arbitrator’s failure to disclose suffice for the court to accept a challenge or do courts require that the undisclosed circumstances justify this outcome?

The institution administering the arbitration is the platform for parties to initially challenge and vet arbitrators’ independence and impartiality, through the appointment process and throughout the proceeding. While some courts maintain that they retain the inherent power to monitor issues of arbitrator impartiality, courts are generally reluctant to interfere with arbitration proceedings. The FAA instead provides for the vacatur of an arbitration award when an arbitrator has demonstrated “evident partiality.”

The Supreme Court established the “evident partiality” standard in Commonwealth Coatings v. Continental Casualty Co. Writing for a plurality, Justice Black found that arbitrators not only needed to avoid actual bias, but must also “avoid even the appearance of bias.”83 Thus, a failure to disclose information that could create such an appearance could lead to vacatur, even in the absence of actual bias. In a concurring opinion, however, Justice White added that arbitrators need not be disqualified if they have business relationships with the litigants but disclose them in advance, or if they fail to disclose what is otherwise a “trivial” relationship. This plurality opinion has led to differing interpretations of the standard by the federal courts. For example, in the Second Circuit, which includes New York, “[e]vident partiality may be found only where a reasonable person would have to conclude that an arbitrator was partial to one party to the arbitration” and a failure to disclose a relationship which would not meet the standard is not on its own a basis for vacatur.84 The Eleventh Circuit, which includes Florida, in contrast, finds “evident partiality of an arbitrator only when either (1) an actual conflict exists, or (2) the arbitrator knows of, but fails to disclose, information which would lead a reasonable person to believe that a potential conflict exists.”85

4.3 On what grounds do courts intervene to assist in the constitution of the arbitral tribunal (in case of ad hoc arbitration)?

The FAA makes clear that courts are intended only as a last resort for the constitution of an arbitral tribunal, which should otherwise be handled by the parties’ agreement or the administering institution. However, courts can appoint arbitrators under two scenarios: (1) where an agreement calls for appointment to be handled by an institution that either does not exist or has ceased to exist; and (2) where the parties’ agreement does not provide for a method of appointment and the parties “fail to avail [themselves] of such a method, or if for any other reason there shall be a lapse in the naming of an arbitrator or arbitrators...”86 Under such circumstances, the FAA generally permits courts to appoint arbitrators, assign an arbitral institution to administer the proceedings, or develop an ad hoc method for appointment. However, where the arbitration agreement is subject to Chapter 3 of the FAA (i.e., the Panama Convention), the FAA and the Panama Convention call for appointment pursuant to the rules of procedure of the Inter-American Commercial Arbitration Commission.87

Florida Supplement: The Florida FIAA authorizes the Florida courts to appoint an arbitrator where an arbitration agreement provides for one arbitrator and the parties are unable to agree on an appointee.88 Additionally, the courts can intervene at the request of a party where (1) an arbitration agreement provides for three arbitrators and one of the parties fails to nominate one of the arbitrators or the two arbitrators nominated by the parties are unable to agree on a third arbitrator;89 (2) the parties, their appointed arbitrators, or a third party fails to act or reach an agreement pursuant to the chosen appointment procedure;90 (3) a party that has unsuccessfully challenged an arbitrator’s appointment seeks the circuit court’s review within 30 days of its initial, unsuccessful challenge;91 or (4) an arbitrator becomes unable to perform his or her functions or for other reasons fails to act without undue delay and does not withdraw from the arbitration.92

Texas Supplement: Section 171.041 of the TAA provides that a “court, on application of a party stating the nature of the issues to be arbitrated and the qualifications of the proposed arbitrators, shall appoint one or more qualified arbitrators if: (1) the agreement to arbitrate does not specify a method of appointment; (2) the agreed method fails or cannot be followed; or (3) an appointed arbitrator fails or is unable to act and a successor has not been appointed.”

Section 172.054 of the TIAA provides an appointment mechanism for a court under certain circumstances. Specifically, “the district court of the county in which the place of arbitration is located shall appoint each arbitrator if: (1) an agreement is not made under Section 172.053(a) in an arbitration with a sole arbitrator and the parties fail to agree on the arbitrator; or (2) the appointment procedure in Section 172.053(b) applies and: (A) a party fails to appoint an arbitrator not later than the 30th day after the date of receipt of a request to do so from the other party; or (B) the two appointed arbitrators fail to agree on the third arbitrator not later than the 30th day after the date of their appointment.” Section 172.055 provides the following factors, which the district court shall consider in appointing an arbitrator: (1) each qualification required of the arbitrator by the arbitration agreement; (2) any consideration making more likely the appointment of an independent and impartial arbitrator; and (3) in the case of a sole or third arbitrator, the advisability of appointing an arbitrator of a nationality other than that of any party.

4.4 Do courts have the power to issue interim measures in connection with arbitrations?

While the FAA itself is silent on interim relief, most federal circuits permit injunctive relief pending arbitration under the usual test applicable to injunctions. Although rarely exercised, federal courts generally have the power to grant such relief on an ex parte basis. Furthermore, state arbitration statutes often expressly provide for such measures. For example, New York law contains a specific statute dealing with attachments or preliminary injunctions in aid of an arbitration anywhere in the world, so long as a party can show that any eventual award might be rendered ineffectual but for the interim relief.

Florida Supplement: The Florida FIAA grants Florida courts the same power as they have in court proceedings to issue interim relief in aid of an international arbitration anywhere in the world, provided they exercise that power in accordance with the applicable requirements and in consideration of the specific features of international arbitration.

Texas Supplement: Section 171.086 of the TAA grants Texas courts the power to issue interim relief before or during an arbitration, as does Section 172.175 of the TIAA in the context of international commercial proceedings. These provisions do not expressly provide for an ex parte procedure. Although rare, Texas courts have issued temporary restraining orders in connection with arbitration proceedings on an ex parte basis.

4.5 Other than arbitrators’ duty to be independent and impartial, does the law regulate the conduct of the arbitration?

The FAA does not expressly address many of the specific issues raised in the questions set out in this section. U.S. courts, however, have developed case law interpreting the FAA to grant broad discretion to the parties and arbitrators.

4.5.1 Does it provide for the confidentiality of arbitration proceedings?

The FAA does not address confidentiality. Ordinarily, confidentiality is either left to party agreement or addressed in accordance with the rules of an arbitral institution. In practice, arbitral proceedings are generally conducted in private facilities, making public access a non-issue even in the absence of express confidentiality. However, parties should be aware that court proceedings to compel arbitration, or confirm and enforce an award, will require parties to append their arbitration agreement or award to court pleadings. Such court pleadings are publicly accessible unless independent grounds exist to keep them sealed from the public (e.g., they contain trade secrets, medical information, etc.).

96 See, e.g., Ortho Pharm. Corp. v. Amgen, Inc., 882 F.2d 806, 812 (3d Cir. 1989) (“we hold that a district court has the authority to grant injunctive relief in an arbitrable dispute, provided that the traditional prerequisites for such relief are satisfied.”).

4.5.2 Does it regulate the length of arbitration proceedings?

The FAA is silent on length of proceedings; this is left to the parties and arbitrators.

4.5.3 Does it regulate the place where hearings and/or meetings may be held?

Section 4 of Chapter 1 of the FAA provides that federal courts may enforce an agreement to arbitrate by issuing a compulsory “order directing that such arbitration proceed in the manner provided for in such agreement” but also specifying that the “hearing and proceedings, under such agreement, shall be within the [judicial] district in which the petition for an order directing such arbitration is filed.” Most courts have interpreted this provision to mean that the court-compelled arbitration can only take place in the judicial district in which the petition to compel arbitration was filed.98 Some of these courts have applied this limitation even where the parties have selected a different arbitration seat in the agreement.99 This restriction, however, only applies to domestic U.S. arbitrations. Chapters 2 and 3 of the FAA governing agreements falling under the New York and Panama Conventions, respectively, are broader and expressly provide that courts may direct arbitration to be held at the agreed upon place, “whether that place is within or without the United States.”100

4.5.4 Does it allow for arbitrators to issue interim measures? In the affirmative, under what conditions?

The FAA does not address the issuance of interim relief by arbitrators. Courts, however, take the view that arbitrators have the implied power to grant interim measures, absent the expression of a contrary intent in the arbitration agreement.101 Furthermore, many arbitral institution rules specifically authorize arbitrators to issue interim relief.102

Florida Supplement: The Florida FIAA provides that an arbitrator overseeing an international arbitration has the power, which can be waived by an agreement between the parties, to issue interim relief to maintain or restore the “status quo” pending the determination of the dispute, to prevent imminent harm or prejudice to the arbitral process, to provide a means of preserving assets that might satisfy an award, and to preserve evidence that might be relevant to the dispute.103

4.5.5 Does it regulate the arbitrators’ right to admit/exclude evidence? For example, are there any restrictions to the presentation of testimony by a party employee?

The FAA does not regulate an arbitrator’s right to admit or exclude evidence. Arbitrators generally have broad discretion on evidentiary rulings, subject to any contrary agreement by the parties or applicable arbitration rules.104

Section 7 of the FAA does, however, grant arbitrators subpoena power to summon witnesses and evidence, and authorizes courts to compel attendance of those refusing to testify.105 The courts’ power is in turn constrained by the applicable rules of civil procedure, such as Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 45(b)(2), which limits a district court’s subpoena power to a 100-mile territorial limit outside of its own jurisdiction. Indeed, some courts have held that this territorial limitation also applies to an arbitrator’s subpoena power.106

There are other potential limits on an arbitrator’s power to subpoena non-parties. In particular, federal courts have disagreed about whether Section 7 of the FAA applies to pre-hearing discovery or is limited to attendance at the hearing. For example, the Second and Third Circuits have held that the Section 7 is restricted to situations in which a non-party is asked to physically appear before the arbitrator(s) and hand over documents and testify.107

Florida Supplement: The Florida FIAA grants an arbitrator overseeing an international arbitration the power to determine the admissibility, relevance, materiality, and weight of evidence.108

Texas Supplement: Similar to the FAA, the TAA does not regulate an arbitrator’s right to admit or exclude evidence. The TAA does grant certain powers to the arbitrator related to different types of evidence, including the power to authorize a deposition, and to issue a subpoena, either for the attendance of a witness or for production of books, records, documents or other evidence.109 Section 172.104 of the TIAA states that the “power of the arbitration tribunal under Section 172.103(b) includes the power to determine the admissibility, relevance, materiality, and weight of any evidence.”110
4.5.6 Does it make it mandatory to hold a hearing?

The FAA does not expressly require a hearing, and courts recognize the parties’ freedom to design their own arbitral procedures. However, an arbitral award is subject to vacatur under the FAA if it violates tenets of due process, including “refusing to hear evidence pertinent and material to the controversy.” Courts interpreting this standard have required arbitrations to satisfy certain basic requirements, including procedural fairness, notice, a hearing or other meaningful opportunity to be heard, or otherwise risk vacatur. Grounds for vacatur have also been found when hearings were scheduled in a fundamentally unfair manner.

4.5.7 Does it prescribe principles governing the awarding of interest?

The FAA does not provide for the award of interest – a matter left to the discretion of the arbitrator. However, upon confirmation of the award, the post-award interest rate set forth in the award will generally cease to accrue, and is replaced by the statutory interest rate of the relevant jurisdiction applicable to judgments.

4.5.8 Does it prescribe principles governing the allocation of arbitration costs?

In the United States, parties to a litigation are generally required to bear their own costs and legal fees, barring statutory provisions to the contrary. While the FAA itself is silent on the issue of party costs and attorney fees, courts have upheld awards of costs and attorney fees provided that they are authorized by the parties’ agreement.

5. Liability

5.1 Do arbitrators benefit from immunity to civil liability?

The FAA does not expressly address arbitrator immunity. However, courts generally grant arbitrators immunity from civil liability for actions undertaken within the scope of their capacity as arbitrators.

Florida Supplement: Florida law grants arbitrators “judicial immunity,” which grants arbitrators absolute immunity for actions taken while acting in their capacity as arbitrators, except those taken in the clear absence of jurisdiction.

Texas Supplement: Texas courts have confirmed the doctrine of arbitral immunity, which “is derived from judicial immunity, which establishes that judges are absolutely immune from personal liability for judicial acts...”

that are not performed in clear absence of all jurisdiction, regardless of how erroneous the act, or how evil the motive.”

5.2 Are there any concerns arising from potential criminal liability for any of the participants in an arbitration proceeding?

No, to the best of our knowledge, there are no special concerns relating to criminal liability that arise out of participation in arbitration proceedings.

6. The Award

6.1 Can parties waive the requirement for an award to provide reasons?

Although the FAA presumes that awards will be written, it does not require that they will be signed, dated, or reasoned. Nor do courts interpreting the FAA require that arbitral awards be reasoned. Rather, they generally deem unreasoned awards valid and enforceable, provided the relevant institutional rules or arbitration agreement do not require otherwise.

Florida Supplement: The Florida FIAA provides that the award must state reasons unless the parties agree that no reasons are to be given or the award is one on agreed terms.

Texas Supplement: Section 171.053 of the TAA states that the arbitrator's award “must be in writing and signed by each arbitrator joining in the award.” However, it does not require that the award be reasoned, nor is a failure to state reasons listed as a ground for vacating an award. Section 172.141(b) states that the “award must state the reasons on which it is based, unless the parties have agreed that no reasons are to be given, or the award is an award on agreed terms under Section 172.117.”

6.2 Can parties waive the right to seek the annulment of the award?

6.2.1 If yes, under what conditions?

The federal courts are divided over whether parties can completely waive the statutory right to seek annulment (i.e., vacatur) of arbitral awards, with most holding that they cannot do so. Challenges for specific reasons, however, may be waived when the challenging party did not raise the challenge during the arbitration proceedings despite being aware of the relevant facts.

Florida Supplement: A party can waive its right to have an award “set aside” if it fails to comply with the technical conditions set out in Section 684.0046 of the Florida FIAA for seeking to annul an award.

Texas Supplement: Texas courts have confirmed that a party may not sit idly by during an arbitration procedure and then collaterally attack that procedure on grounds not raised before the arbitrator when the result

This has been applied in the context of arbitrator bias, when courts have stated that a party waives the right to complain after the fact if it “knows or has reason to know of an arbitrator’s bias, but remains silent pending the outcome of the arbitration.” Courts have further confirmed that the “90-day period in the Texas General Arbitration Act (TGAA) following delivery of an arbitration award during which a party can file an application to vacate is a limitations period, after which the party cannot ask a court to vacate the award.”

6.2.2 What atypical mandatory requirements apply to the rendering of a valid award rendered at a seat in the jurisdiction?

As set forth above, the FAA does not impose any formal requirements, although state laws or institutional rules may do so.

6.3 Is it possible to appeal an award (as opposed to seeking its annulment)?

6.3.1 If yes, what are the grounds for appeal?

While some arbitral institutions can provide for appeal-like mechanisms under their rules, the FAA does not provide for an appeal from an award and only provides limited grounds for vacating, modifying, or correcting the award.

Florida Supplement: Florida law does not provide for an appeal. It only provides for a limited application to set aside an award as the “exclusive recourse against [an] arbitral award.”

Texas Supplement: The TAA does not expressly provide for appeal and sets out very specific grounds for vacating an award in Section 171.088, which are similar to those of the FAA. The Texas Supreme Court has “the FAA does not preempt enforcement of an agreement for expanded judicial review of an arbitration award enforceable under the TAA.”

6.4 What procedures exist for the recognition and enforcement of awards, what time-limits apply and is there a distinction to be made between local and foreign awards?

A party seeking to confirm an award under the FAA must file an application with the court within one year of the issuance of the award. However, awards subject to the New York Convention or the Panama Convention may be confirmed within three years of the award. In each case, parties seeking to enforce an award must attach to their filing both a copy of the award and a copy of the arbitration agreement.

Florida Supplement: The Florida FIAA states that, upon application in writing to the court, an arbitral award “irrespective of the country in which it was made, shall be recognized as binding” and shall be enforced except in the following circumstances:

1) A party to the arbitration agreement was under some incapacity or the agreement is not valid under the law to which the parties have subjected it or, failing any indication thereon, under the law of the country where the award was made;

131 Nafta Traders Inc. v. Quinn, 339 S.W.3d 84, 101-02 (Tex. 2011).
2) the party against whom the award is invoked was not given proper notice of the appointment of an arbitrator or of the arbitral proceedings or was otherwise unable to present its case;

3) the award deals with a dispute not contemplated by or not falling within the terms of the submission to arbitration, or it contains decisions on matters beyond the scope of the submission to arbitration; if the decisions on matters submitted to arbitration can be separated from those not so submitted, that part of the award which contains decisions on matters submitted to arbitration may be recognized and enforced;

4) the composition of the arbitral tribunal or the arbitral procedure was not in accordance with the agreement of the parties or, failing such agreement, was not in accordance with the law of the country where the arbitration took place; or

5) the award has not yet become binding on the parties or has been set aside or suspended by a court of the country in which, or under the law of which, that award was made.136

A court may also refuse to recognize or enforce an award if it finds (1) the subject matter of the dispute is not capable of settlement by arbitration in Florida, or if (2) recognizing or enforcing the award would be contrary to Florida public policy.137

Texas Supplement: Section 171.087 of the TAA states that “Unless grounds are offered for vacating, modifying, or correcting an award under Section 171.088 or 171.091, the court, on application of a party, shall confirm the award.”138

6.5 Does the introduction of annulment or appeal proceedings automatically suspend the exercise of the right to enforce an award?

For an award to become enforceable, it must first be confirmed pursuant to the FAA, whereupon it becomes binding as if it were a judgment rendered by a U.S. court. A party seeking to vacate the award in the U.S. must therefore seek to do so before the award becomes confirmed. In practice, confirmation and vacatur determinations will tend to take place simultaneously in the same court proceeding.

However, when the award was rendered abroad, Chapter 2 of the FAA incorporates the New York Convention, Article IV of which provides courts with discretion to stay U.S. confirmation proceedings if an application for vacatur has been made at the seat of the competent authority. Even in such a scenario, however, the court still has discretion to deny the stay and may additionally require the party seeking it to post security.

Florida Supplement: Section 48 of the Florida FIAA authorizes a party to request a stay of enforcement when the award has been set aside by the issuing court.139 That decision is subject to the court's discretion, and the Florida FIAA does not contemplate suspending the right to enforce an award simply because there are proceedings to annul or set aside an award.

6.6 When a foreign award has been annulled at its seat, does such annulment preclude the award from being enforced in the jurisdiction?

Although the text of the New York Convention suggests that a court has discretion to confirm an award even if it has been vacated, a U.S. court will not enforce an international award that has been vacated at the seat of arbitration (i.e., by the “competent authority”) absent extraordinary circumstances. In a notable exception, however, the Second Circuit affirmed the confirmation of an award that had been vacated in

Mexico – the seat of the arbitration – because the Mexican court retroactively applied the law, an act deemed contrary to “fundamental notions of what is decent and just” in the United States.\textsuperscript{140}

\textbf{Florida Supplement:} The Florida FIAA follows the New York Convention, theoretically granting courts discretion to confirm an award even if it has been annulled (“recognition or enforcement […] may be refused”). As a practical matter, however, a Florida court is unlikely to enforce an award that has been annulled.\textsuperscript{141}

6.7 Are foreign awards readily enforceable in practice?

Yes. U.S. courts embrace a policy favoring the recognition and enforcement of arbitral awards.\textsuperscript{142} As such, foreign awards are readily confirmed and enforced in the U.S., consistent with the policy of the New York Convention. Courts have even imposed sanctions on parties seeking to vacate or delay confirmation of an award without a substantial basis for doing so.\textsuperscript{143}

7. Funding Arrangements

7.1 Are there restrictions to the use of contingency or alternative fee arrangements or third-party funding at the jurisdiction? If so, what is the practical and/or legal impact of such restrictions?

The terms and legality of funding arrangements are governed by U.S. state laws, whether or not an arbitration falls under the FAA. Each state has attorney ethical rules and possibly other rules (e.g., champerty) that should be consulted.

\textbf{Florida Supplement:} While the Florida FIAA and Florida law do not directly bar the use of contingency fees, alternative fee arrangements, or third-party funding for arbitrations, the ethical rules in Florida impose certain restrictions. For example, Rule 4-1.5 of the Florida Rules of Professional Conduct states that attorneys “\textit{shall not enter into an agreement for, charge, or collect an illegal, prohibited, or clearly excessive fee.}” This Rule also sets out factors for determining if fees are reasonable.\textsuperscript{144} Moreover, attorneys are required to put contingent fee agreements in writing and provide details on the terms of any such agreement.\textsuperscript{145}

In addition, the Florida Bar has stated that it “\textit{discourages the use of non-recourse advance funding companies.}”\textsuperscript{146} Indeed, although the Florida Bar has advised that an attorney may provide a client with information about companies that offer non-recourse advance funding, the Bar concluded that “[t]he attorney shall not recommend the client’s matter to the funding company nor initiate contact with the funding company on a client’s behalf.”\textsuperscript{147}

7.2  Is there likely to be any significant reform of the arbitration law in the near future?

There have been several proposals to amend the FAA in recent years, primarily to curtail the arbitrability of certain types of disputes, such as consumer credit card cases, and labor and employment issues. However, few of these proposals have made any significant progress towards becoming law. Furthermore, because the U.S. is a common law system, binding case law continues to develop and inform the application of the FAA. Most notably, the Supreme Court has shown an interest in addressing issues relating to class action arbitration, and is likely to continue opining on the FAA in the coming years.

Florida Supplement: There are no expected revisions to the Florida FIAA at this time.

Texas Supplement: There are no expected revisions to the TAA or TIAA at this time.

DOMESTIC ARBITRATION IN CALIFORNIA

1. The legal framework

California's International Commercial Arbitration and Conciliation Act ("the Act") is based on the 1985 UNCITRAL Model Law. However, California's domestic arbitration law—the California Arbitration Act ("CAA")—is a separate law, and it is not based on the UNCITRAL Model Law.

The CAA is based on the Uniform Arbitration Act, which is a model law created by the Uniform Law Commission. Although the California Legislature regularly amends or updates small portions of the CAA, most provisions of the CAA have not been revised since it was first passed in 1961.

2. The Arbitration Agreement

As with all arbitrations, the arbitration agreement is the centerpiece of arbitration under the CAA. California courts will interpret an arbitration agreement to determine whether the parties intended to use the CAA rather than the FAA. “There is a 'strong default presumption that the Federal Arbitration Act, not state law, supplies the rules for arbitration.'” To overcome that presumption, parties to an arbitration agreement must evidence a 'clear intent' to incorporate state law rules for arbitration.” Where an arbitration agreement provides that California law applies, the courts will presume the parties elected to apply California state law on substantive matters, but federal law for the arbitration procedures.

Typically, an agreement's arbitration clause is considered separately from the rest of the contract. Courts evaluate the arbitration clause, as compared to the contract as a whole, to determine arbitrability. Challenges to the validity of the underlying contract (i.e., ambiguous, unclear, lack of consideration, mutual mistake) are not considered.

Under the CAA, there are no specific, unique requirements for an arbitration clause. In general, a written agreement to submit a dispute to arbitration “is valid, enforceable and irrevocable, save upon such grounds as exist for the revocation of any contract.” The question of whether a valid agreement to arbitrate exists is determined by reference to the law applicable to contracts generally. Arbitration agreements are subject to rescission on the same grounds as other contracts, and a petition to compel arbitration “is not to be granted when there are grounds for rescinding the agreement.”

Generally, because arbitration is based on a contract, only parties to the arbitration agreement can be compelled to arbitrate. However, in certain instances, a third-party can be bound by the arbitration agreement where: (1) the nonsignatory is a third-party beneficiary of the contract containing the arbitration agreement; or (2) “a preexisting relationship existed between the nonsignatory and one of the parties to the arbitration agreement, making it equitable to compel the nonsignatory to also be bound to arbitrate his or her claim."\textsuperscript{160}

With regard to whether claims are arbitrable, the U.S. Supreme Court has held that the FAA preempts state laws that prohibit the arbitration of particular types of claims.\textsuperscript{161} Generally, under the CAA, if the arbitration clause is broadly worded, most contract and tort claims are arbitrable.\textsuperscript{162} However, the court will determine whether an agreement to arbitrate has been entered into before compelling arbitration. For example, in \textit{Long v. Provide Commerce}, the court declined to compel arbitration where the arbitration agreement was contained in a browserwrap agreement.\textsuperscript{163} The court held that the website at issue failed to put a reasonably prudent user on inquiry notice of the terms of the supposed contract.

Additionally, for certain types of disputes, California has additional statutory requirements for enforceable arbitration agreements.\textsuperscript{164}

Further, certain types of claims are not subject to arbitration as a matter of law, including, for example: residential leases that seek to waive a tenant's rights in litigation;\textsuperscript{165} injury or death claims in real property purchase agreements;\textsuperscript{166} construction subcontracts requiring arbitration outside of California;\textsuperscript{167} and employment contracts requiring employees residing and working in California to litigate or arbitrate disputes outside of California.\textsuperscript{168}

California law also requires that any waiver of the right to seek judicial redress must be knowing, voluntary and expressly not made as a condition of entering into a contract or as a condition of providing or receiving goods or services.\textsuperscript{169}

3. \textbf{Intervention of Domestic Courts}

Generally, California courts will stay litigation if there is a valid arbitration agreement covering the dispute.\textsuperscript{170} However, a court may deny a petition to compel arbitration where a party to an arbitration agreement is also (1) a party to a pending court action or special proceeding with a third party (2) arising out of the same transaction or series of related transactions and (3) there is the possibility of conflicting rulings on a common issue of law or fact.\textsuperscript{171}

Additionally, a party seeking to stay court proceedings should seek a stay in California while an arbitration is pending in another jurisdiction. Under California law, after a petition to compel arbitration has been granted and a lawsuit stayed, "the arbitrator takes over. It is the job of the arbitrator, not the court, to resolve all questions needed to determine the controversy."\textsuperscript{172}

\bibitem{164} See, e.g., Cal. Civ. Proc. Code, § 1295 (medical malpractice); § 1298 (disputes arising from real estate contracts).
\bibitem{168} Cal. Labor Code § 925(a), (b), (c), (f).
\bibitem{169} See Cal. Civ. Code §§ 51.7, 52, 52.1; see, also McGill v. Citibank, N.A., 2 Cal. 5th 945 (2017) (holding that the arbitration agreement could not be enforced because it violated California’s anti-waiver statute (Cal. Civ. Code § 3513) prohibiting contractual terms waiving a party’s “public rights”).
\end{thebibliography}
Under California law, “an arbitration provision does not oust the court of jurisdiction to hear the matter but merely means if one party chooses to arbitrate, a petition may be filed to stay the proceedings, order arbitration and then confirm the award.” Even when a stay has been issued, the court retains limited jurisdiction over the dispute. Additionally, California courts have the power to enjoin proceedings in another jurisdiction when there are exceptional circumstances that outweigh the threat to judicial restraint and where principles of comity warrant such a solution.

4. The conduct of the proceedings

California has unique rules regarding the conduct of arbitral proceedings. For domestic arbitrations, California law limits the types of attorneys who may represent parties. California courts also enforce strict rules regarding the neutrality of arbitrators. Arbitrators may issue orders to support the arbitration, including interim orders and discovery orders. As a default, parties to California arbitrations pay for their own costs and fees.

4.1 Representation by Counsel

Parties have the right to be represented by an attorney at any arbitration proceeding, although parties are not required to retain counsel in every instance. In domestic arbitrations seated in California, a party can be represented by (a) a California-licensed attorney; or (b) any other licensed attorney who registers with the California Bar to act as “Out-of-State Attorney Arbitration Counsel.” Additionally, with regard to international arbitration, as of January 1, 2019, parties can be represented by: (a) a California-licensed attorney; or (b) any “qualified attorney.” A “qualified attorney” is any individual who is all of the following:

- "Admitted to practice law in a state or territory of the United States or the District of Columbia or a member of a recognized legal profession in a foreign jurisdiction, the members of which are admitted or otherwise authorized to practice as attorneys or counselors at law or the equivalent."

- “Subject to effective regulation and discipline by a duly constituted professional body or public authority of that jurisdiction.”

- “In good standing in every jurisdiction in which he or she is admitted or otherwise authorized to practice.”

A “qualified attorney” may provide legal services in a proceeding if any of the following conditions is satisfied:

- “The services are undertaken in association with an attorney who is admitted to practice in this state and who actively participates in the matter.”

- “The services arise out of or are reasonably related to the attorney’s practice in a jurisdiction in which the attorney is admitted to practice.”

- “The services are performed for a client who resides in or has an office in the jurisdiction in which the attorney is admitted or otherwise authorized to practice.”

174 See Titan/Value Equities Group, Inc. v. Superior Court, 29 Cal. App. 4th 482, 487 (1994) (explaining that after a stay is issued, court retains “vestigial” jurisdiction to appoint arbitrators if the method selected by the parties fails, to provide a provisional remedy, and to confirm, correct, or vacate the award).
• “The services arise out of or are reasonably related to a matter that has a substantial connection to a jurisdiction in which the attorney is admitted or otherwise authorized to practice.”

• “The services arise out of a dispute governed primarily by international law or the law of a foreign or out-of-state jurisdiction.”

In sum, as of January 1, 2019, parties to international arbitrations seated in California can, in practice, be represented by almost any attorney they choose.

4.2 Arbitrator Neutrality

With regard to arbitrators, California courts closely guard the impartiality of arbitrators. California law requires neutral arbitrators to disclose, within 10 days of being nominated, “all matters that could cause a person aware of the facts to reasonably entertain a doubt that the proposed neutral arbitrator would be able to be impartial.” Unlike the UNCITRAL Model Law, the CAA includes a lengthy list of specific circumstances that must be disclosed. These required disclosures are extensive; for example, a neutral arbitrator must disclose any professional or personal relationship with any lawyer or law firm retained by any party. Neutral arbitrators must also disclose if they have previously served as an arbitrator in any matter that involved one of the parties’ counsel. Once appointed, arbitrators in California enjoy absolute immunity from civil liability for acts arising from the arbitral process.

If an arbitrator fails to file the required disclosures within 10 days, the arbitrator “shall be disqualified.” Moreover, an arbitrator’s failure to disclose facts which “could cause a person aware of the facts to reasonably entertain a doubt that the proposed neutral arbitrator would be able to be impartial” warrants vacation of his or her award, even without any show of prejudice.

California courts will assist the parties with the appointment of an arbitrator if necessary, as follows:

If the arbitration agreement provides a method of appointing an arbitrator, that method shall be followed. If the arbitration agreement does not provide a method for appointing an arbitrator, the parties to the agreement who seek arbitration and against whom arbitration is sought may agree on a method of appointing an arbitrator and that method shall be followed. In the absence of an agreed method, or if the agreed method fails or for any reason cannot be followed, or when an arbitrator appointed fails to act and his or her successor has not been appointed, the court, on petition of a party to the arbitration agreement, shall appoint the arbitrator.

4.3 Interim Measures

California courts may also order interim measures, “but only upon the ground that the award to which the applicant may be entitled may be rendered ineffectual without provisional relief.” And there is no limitation on ex parte requests. However, the CAA does not grant arbitrators independent powers to issue interim measures.

measures, but the parties' agreement or the agreed-upon arbitration rules may allow for some interim or provisional relief.\textsuperscript{189}

4.4 Confidentiality

The CAA does not provide for the confidentiality of the arbitral proceedings. It also does not regulate the length of the arbitration, the location of proceedings, the arbitrators' ability to admit or exclude evidence, and it does not make a hearing mandatory.\textsuperscript{190}

4.5 Powers of the Arbitrator

Regarding available procedures, either the parties or the arbitrator may issue subpoenas for witness testimony or may require the production of documents to facilitate the arbitration.\textsuperscript{191} In some cases, the CAA requires the arbitral panel to permit depositions. In any arbitration relating to “any injury to, or death of, a person caused by the wrongful act or neglect of another,” the arbitral panel must permit the parties to take depositions of witnesses.\textsuperscript{192}

4.6 Costs of Arbitration

Regarding costs of arbitration, the CAA states: “\textit{Unless the arbitration agreement otherwise provides or the parties to the arbitration otherwise agree, each party to the arbitration shall pay his pro rata share of the expenses and fees of the neutral arbitrator, together with other expenses of the arbitration incurred or approved by the neutral arbitrator, not including counsel fees or witness fees or other expenses incurred by a party for his own benefit.}”\textsuperscript{193} However, special protections apply in consumer arbitrations. California law prevents arbitrators from “requiring that a consumer who is a party to the arbitration pay the fees and costs incurred by an opposing party if the consumer does not prevail in the arbitration, including, but not limited to, the fees and costs of the arbitrator, provider organization, attorney, or witnesses.”\textsuperscript{194}

5. The Award

Under the CAA, the arbitral award must be in writing and signed by the arbitrators concurring therein. “\textit{It shall include a determination of all the questions submitted to the arbitrators the decision of which is necessary in order to determine the controversy.}”\textsuperscript{195} Absent and agreement by the parties, “[a]rbitrators are not required to explain their awards or provide reasons for their conclusions.”\textsuperscript{196}

With regard to annulling or vacating the award, a party may waive the right to seek the annulment of the award if it does not comply with the requirements of California Code of Civil Procedure Section 1286.4, which outlines the conditions to vacation of an award:

The court may not vacate an award unless:

(a) A petition or response requesting that the award be vacated has been duly served and filed; or

(b) A petition or response requesting that the award be corrected has been duly served and filed and:

\begin{itemize}
  \item \textsuperscript{190} Cal. Civ. Proc. Code § 1282.2.
  \item \textsuperscript{192} Cal. Civ. Proc. Code §§ 1283.1, 1283.05.
  \item \textsuperscript{193} Cal. Vic. Proc. Code § 1284.2.
  \item \textsuperscript{194} Cal. Civ. Proc. Code § 1284.3.
  \item \textsuperscript{195} Cal. Civ. Proc. Code § 1283.4.
  \item \textsuperscript{196} Arco Alaska, Inc. v. Superior Court, 168 Cal. App. 3d 139, 148 (1985) (citing Sapp v. Barenfeld, 34 Cal. 2d 515, 523 (1949)).
\end{itemize}
(1) All petitioners and respondents are before the court; or
(2) All petitioners and respondents have been given reasonable notice that the court will be requested at the hearing to vacate the award or that the court on its own motion has determined to vacate the award and all petitioners and respondents have been given an opportunity to show why the award should not be vacated. 197

Through its conduct, or failing to assert its rights, a party may otherwise waive its right to seek annulment of an award. 198

With regard to appealing an award, generally, “[a]bsent an express agreement to the contrary, a court has no authority to review the merits of the controversy, the validity of the arbitrator’s reasoning or the sufficiency of the evidence supporting the arbitrator’s award.” 199

California Code of Civil Procedure Section 1286.2 sets forth exceptions to this general rule of non-reviewability. By enacting the exceptions, the Legislature sought to permit judicial review when the circumstances show “‘serious problems with the award itself, or with the fairness of the arbitration process.’” 200

Under California Code of Civil Procedure Section 1286.2, a court shall vacate an arbitration award if the court determines the following:

1. The award was procured by corruption, fraud or other undue means.
2. There was corruption in any of the arbitrators.
3. The rights of the party were substantially prejudiced by misconduct of a neutral arbitrator.
4. The arbitrators exceeded their powers and the award cannot be corrected without affecting the merits of the decision upon the controversy submitted.
5. The rights of the party were substantially prejudiced by the refusal of the arbitrators to postpone the hearing upon sufficient cause being shown therefor or by the refusal of the arbitrators to hear evidence material to the controversy or by other conduct of the arbitrators contrary to the provisions of this title.
6. An arbitrator making the award either: (A) failed to disclose within the time required for disclosure a ground for disqualification of which the arbitrator was then aware; or (B) was subject to disqualification upon grounds specified in Section 1281.91 but failed upon receipt of timely demand to disqualify himself or herself as required by that provision. However, this subdivision does not apply to arbitration proceedings conducted under a collective bargaining agreement between employers and employees or between their respective representatives. 201

With regard to confirming an award, “[a]ny party to an arbitration in which an award has been made may petition the court to confirm, correct or vacate the award. The petition shall name as respondents all parties to the arbitration and may name as respondents any other persons bound by the arbitration award."²⁰²  "A petition to confirm an award shall be served and filed not later than four years after the date of service of a signed copy of the award on the petitioner. A petition to vacate an award or to correct an award shall be served and filed not later than 100 days after the date of the service of a signed copy of the award on the petitioner."²⁰³  And "[n]o petition may be served and filed ... until at least 10 days after service of the signed copy of the award upon the petitioner."²⁰⁴

"If an award is confirmed, judgment shall be entered in conformity therewith."²⁰⁵  The judgment has the same force and effect as a judgment in a civil action, and it may be enforced like any other court judgment.

6.  Funding arrangements

Under the CAA, there are no specific restrictions on funding arrangements—whether contingency or alternative fee arrangements, nor third-party funding. However, attorneys must navigate their ethical obligations.²⁰⁶
